DP Technology ESPRIT 2019 R3 Release 3... Norgestimate/chlormadinone can be helpful, but due to their hormonal side effects, lots of other endo's would also prefer to not take them. It is frustrating to see people who are told by their doctors that they can't take other forms of hormone replacement. Usually it's the combination of Norgestimate and Chlormadinone that is used in birth control. The use of OCPs is a controversial issue since there is a concern of increased risk of thromboembolic disease, breast cancer and heart disease. At this time, the only proven risk of hormone replacement therapy is of developing endometrial cancer. The FDA recommends that a woman's risk of developing endometrial cancer is lowered when she takes EMR. The lowest dose of EMR that would still lower her risk was 2000 mcg per day. So the best form to use to get the lowest dose of EMR is natural progesterone. Since it is a steroid, it is possible to get very high doses without risk of side effects. I read about a case where a woman took two tablets of 200mg a day of natural progesterone at night. There was no side effects. The woman said that her PMS symptoms decreased greatly. She was also able to gain weight. If this is a problem for you, there are other forms of progesterone you can buy. There are two natural progesterone products that are available in Canada at the time of publication: Natural Progesterone 2000mg is also a good source for progesterone. I found that the supplement I use has only.55mg of progesterone per tablet. Is it any wonder that the supply of this product was so short? I would prefer to take two natural progesterone tablets a day rather than one tablet a week from an OCP. My doctor had told me that for women with a hypo uterus, I should be taking progesterone as needed. She has prescribed me a progesterone suppository. 3e33713323
