A Sydney woman battling a deadly brain cancer is reeling after discovering her boyfriend has since left her to care for their nine-year-old daughter alone. Eleanor Karlsson was diagnosed with a rare form of malignant brain cancer when she was three-and-a-half months pregnant with her third child. Her only child, Lia, was born in 2007 - and since then the West Sydney mum has been determined to be the best mum she can be. But a recent bout of hospital treatment for her brain tumour has left her weak and vulnerable, and with six-year-old Sofia and three-year-old Scarlett, there is no one else to take care of her. About half way through Ms Karlsson's eight-week hospital stay, her partner of seven years Anthony Jack, whom she met on a night out when she was 22, told her he was leaving her. She said: "He said if I was ready to end it we could, but he said I didn't want to end it. "I kept saying no but he kept saying, 'I don't want you to be alone, I don't want you to be alone'." Ms Karlsson said she still cannot believe he would leave her alone with their young children. "I'm pretty sure he knew how it would be for me when he was done with me," she said. "He said I was too sensitive and he couldn't handle it. I told him I was someone who needed support and couldn't cope by myself." Ms Karlsson believes Anthony, who has moved out of her home, did not leave her alone because he knows she is scared of being on her own. "He's always been very supportive. I don't think he'd leave someone who can't cope on her own and especially not with the kids," she said. Ms Karlsson has since moved back home to her mum's - who is trying to support her. However, she said
