Akt activity is essential for G1/S progression and forcipitous accumulation of cyclin D1 and E in response to growth factor stimulation. We also show that P13 kinase inhibition prevents phosphorylation and degradation of G1 cyclins, thus preventing cyclin accumulation and resumption of the cell cycle. Based on these findings, we propose that IRS-1 is a negative regulator of cyclin levels. We propose that growth factor signaling can overcome the negative feedback control of IRS-1 on P13 kinase signaling by IRS-1 interaction with, and subsequent inactivation of the p85 regulatory subunit of P13 kinase.
