LoveAnimeAn automated breathalyzer is an instrument used to detect blood alcohol concentrations (BACs) of a driver of a vehicle. In a typical system, a vehicle operator is asked to blow into the instrument, which measures alcohol concentration in a sample of the breath. The instruments record the BAC and indicate when the operator has exceeded the legal driving limit of 0.08 g/dL. This recordation is provided in the form of a "drunk" or "clear" light. There are two common ways for a user to use an instrument to detect their BAC: a handheld device that a person holds to his or her nose, or an instrument that is connected to the vehicle, commonly known as a "portable" instrument. The handheld device is relatively compact, handheld, and relatively inexpensive. However, this device also suffers from problems. For instance, a handheld device that is not connected to a vehicle can only be used to detect BACs when a vehicle operator is stationary or moving slowly. A portable breathalyzer is intended to be carried by a vehicle operator as a unit that is always accessible and in close proximity to the operator. However, such instruments can be bulky, heavy, and costly. For example, a typical instrument is roughly three to four pounds and measures roughly 1½ inches in diameter by 3½ inches long. Thus, there is a need for an apparatus that can use some of the features of a handheld device, while at the same time reducing the size, weight, and cost of a portable
