This game is based on my own experience learning ice-skating. It's inspired by my visit to the Tjejhuset in Copenhagen in August 2014, an ice-skating rink which has a rise from the water of about 4 meters (13 feet). How I learned to Skate is a test of stamina, a great experience to learn what it feels like to skate on hard, freezing ice for the first time. My goal is to get a score of 100 skaters. A score of 100 skaters means you've achieved a basic level of proficiency. My challenge is to not fall. To make the experience more difficult, my ice-rink is at sea-level and thus the ice is constantly freezing on me, sometimes harder than I can stand. This challenge puts a premium on quick reactions and a sensitivity to the perfect balance between pushing and pulling. It also includes what feels like having an ice-covered head, which could possibly take the fun out of learning to skate. Some screenshots: On first launch: After some tweaking, it's even more beautiful: This is part one of how I learned to skate. Part two is more to do with the challenges I set myself. I wanted to challenge myself with it. And with learning to ice-skate for the first time, you realize how fragile it is. In late 2014, I learned to skate and lost my virginity to ice-skating. A lot of time later, I recorded and released a game based on this experience. Consider this an attempt to bring together my first lessons learned with ice-skating, it was long ago. It is the first time I've made a game, which hopefully means I'll improve my skills going forward. But what about the rest of us? With nothing but a newspaper and a jar of cool in his hand, the Cool must travel to the most dangerous parts of the world to try and find something that will thaw the universe. Join the Cool on the most dangerous mission of his life! Kappa Momoko No Nai Tanteitappa As usual, I'm starting an official video game, this time a 2-channeled one. Not sure about this game yet but will soon be making a decision about this. I'm thinking about doing like a horror game, maybe a survival game. I don't know yet. I have the idea already but no idea about how to do it yet. I'm also trying to figure out what to do with the first game I'm making. So far it's not really working... but I will figure it out. Anyway, the game is based on Kappa Momoko, a female kappa girl, but she's actually a guy. I'm not sure yet if I'm making a Bishonen game, so, you will have to wait to see a bit more. I'm also thinking about making this game like that, because I think if I could make it a 2-channel game, I should put in a female character of a kappa girl. Let me know what you think. I'm also thinking about doing a PV based on this game, but I'm not sure yet. We'll see... Thanks for watching. Fanta

What's new in MECHBLAZE:

MONSTER GAME I assumed that the songs listed as Boogiepop songs are the series main theme songs. I think the one called "White Witch's Room" is located on EP2 and the one called "Mountain" is located on EP3. The other, I have no idea why it's listed as Boogiepop in this list. Surely you just misread? There's a character called Boogiepop on the cover of EP2, not in the music videos for that song either. The character is a cat (rabbits are animals, boogies are a property), it has yellow eyes, a green tail, and it is white fur. Also, the Seven Ring Show (on Shinsekai Tantei Channel) is only for OVA episodes so most of the non main series songs appear outside of that show. So the main theme for the TV show is "Ame To Waza Fubuki nite" which was written as a sequel to "Kuchibeni To Kuchibeni" from the manga (the song was featured in the HANNESTAN commercial back then). Thanks I watched the Yui-chan OVA and I could find the character on the cover of EP2. Also, the music video wasn't played on TV or aired as a commercial, it wasn't even released as an official single. I'm new to this, so what is a song featured on a commercial/television show considered? The night had not been long in coming, but the day ahead held promise of excitement. After returning to the town of Ravenrock, travelers would need to restock and also purchase some gear, in the coming days they would need to attend trials at the Baron's castle. As travelers gathered for travel preparations, many in the town would have some vague unease. It was a dark morning. The previous nights events would be likely forgotten if the dreams could be dismissed. But it was more than an ordinary dream. Something was out of place in Ravenrock. Something strange was happening. Trouble was brewing at Ravenrock. As foretold a dark spirit was returning to the town of Ravenrock. Or did it? An unquiet animal spirit had returned to the town of Ravenrock. An ancient evil had returned to the ghostly town of Ravenrock. Now the dark spirit would not be denied. An unholy alliance had formed, between a creature of the Netherworld, a barely living spirit of a once defeated demon and a murderous corpse. The cycle of death would spread across the plane of Ravenrock! The ominous clouds rolled in, as the tempest began to stir in the distance. The time had come, the foul spirit could not be denied. The foul spirit had consumed the corpse of a murdered monstrosity that had been slain during the Moon of Blood Moons. Now an unholy alliance of a creature of the Netherworld, a barely living spirit of a once defeated demon and a murderous corpse was creating a devilish evil. That unholy alliance was: Once defeated demon, now a living spirit, a fallen one from the Netherworld Once vanquished corpse, now a murdering corpse, a murderer of monstrosities An unholy alliance of a creature of the Netherworld, a barely living spirit of a once defeated demon and a murderous corpse was walking amongst the town of Ravenrock. Now was the time for all to act. A showdown between the unholy alliance of the resurrected demon, now a living spirit, a fallen one from the Netherworld, and the murderous corpse, now a murdering corpse, a murderer of monstrosities, and the beast of the Netherworld, a creature of the Netherworld, a barely living spirit of a once defeated demon, and the undead warrior, now an unholy alliance. An unholy alliance had formed, between a creature of the Netherworld,
