In a world where technology has become a part of almost all aspects of our lives, there are many people who are intimidated by technology. It is the reason why some people do not know how to program a computer. A career in technology is always an attractive career choice. However, it is important to know how to program a computer before getting a job in the field. The primary goal of computers is to execute programs. A program is a set of instructions to be carried out by a computer. To make a computer execute instructions, a programmer must write the instruction set for the computer. Computers are different from most other devices because they cannot be changed. For example, a pen can be replaced with a different pen, but a computer cannot. This does not mean that technology has replaced the pen. On the contrary, the pen is a part of technology. It is used to write information on an electronic display. Every computer system has two main components: The computer and the software or any programs. It is through the software that a computer will execute instructions. The only way that a computer can execute instructions is to have programs. Hence, a programmer is the person who writes the instructions or the programs that allow the computer to execute instructions. There are different types of programming languages like Pascal, C++, Java, Matlab, etc. These programming languages and different development tools are the methods that programmers use to write instructions that will eventually allow a computer to execute instructions. The field of computer science is vast and programmers work with different programming languages in various ways. Programming languages can be categorized in two ways. The first way is based on the computer's processor and the second is based on the computer's operating system. Based on the type of processor, programming languages can be classified into two categories. There are languages that have been designed to use the processor's instruction set and languages that use an assembler. An assembler is a programming language that takes the instructions received from the processor and converts it into instructions that will execute the program. Most programming languages can be used in both categories. Based on the computer's operating system, programming languages can be classified into two categories. They are "low level" languages and "higher level" languages. To execute an instruction or program, the processor must translate that program into instructions. The lower level languages are more low level than the higher level languages. A low level language must be translated into instructions to execute on the processor. The higher level languages
