* Elements: Like its cousin, InDesign, this graphics app places the emphasis on design. As with InDesign, it works with both the InDesign format (DID) and the native PDF formats. Adobe makes Elements primarily as a vector-based design and drawing application, although it does make the occasional raster image. Elements is available for Apple products and Windows computers. It doesn't work with the Microsoft Office 2007 apps discussed in Chapter 18. * Illustrator: This product was originally released as Mac only, but it has become a cross-platform format. It supports all the basic features and tools that any skilled illustrator should need to design and create images. Figure 2-2 shows a design made in Illustrator, including text, vector shapes, and raster art. FIGURE 2-2: An image with a background layer; blend modes; and a text layer. * Flash: This program is the cross-platform solution for creating and delivering Flash animations. It supports Macs and Windows computers, and you can export images, colors, vectors, and imported images directly to GIF files. It's good at creating Flash animations and may be useful for those who want to create GIF animations. Check out the online version of this book at `www.apress.com`.

A cross-sectional study of the prevalence of human papillomavirus infections among women in Sarajevo. A cross-sectional study was conducted to determine the prevalence of Human Papillomavirus (HPV) infections in women living in Sarajevo, who presented for routine gynecological evaluation. When women attending two urban clinics in Sarajevo reported usual menstrual bleeding patterns, they were recruited into the study. HPV DNA was detected by polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and the types identified by DNA sequencing. The prevalence of HPV was 64.4% (95% CI 58.2-70.7%) with 51 of 55 women (92.7%) infected with HPV types known to be associated with cervical carcinoma. The predominant type was HPV 16 (69.6%), followed by HPV 31 (13.7%), HPV 33 (6.6%), and HPV 18 (4.4%). HPV 18 was found in a number of women who had never had sexual intercourse, suggesting that there is greater than expected transmission from casual contact. HPV 6, 11, 44, and 53 were also detected but were not associated with cervical carcinoma. This survey is the first investigation of the prevalence of HPV infection in Sarajevo. Compared to the rates reported in previous studies, the prevalence of HPV was somewhat lower. This may be a result of successful implementation of the cervical cancer screening program in Bosnia.Q: Are there any sites that provide decentralized, fully decentralized, federated, semi-decentralized or distributed DNS? What I'm looking for is an authoritative distributed DNS/WHOIS (or similar) system. I like the idea of the system being decentralized, but I don't want to have to host DNS servers. I want to be able to run an embedded version of this system on a device and have it perform requests without having to interact with any external servers at all. Also, I would like to be able to centrally add entries for myself and other users to this system. Are there any implementations that do this? Note: I already know that there are things like Google Public DNS that give me the benefits of not having to host a DNS server, but they still require my identity and a way of verifying that identity. A: If you mean a fully decentralized DNS system, there isn't one. It's a huge amount of work. Most of the DNS protocol is designed to work on top of a
