Who is going to be America's next 'American Idol'? Auditions have been held across the nation, competing for a record-breaking $50 million prize. Now some of the public have been selected and we've been handed our first 'Bigger Idol' category - this year's winner will be 21 years old. They'll have to get through 11 stages of judging, including a live show, before we find out who will be top of the heap. The series already has America's 'favorite' Idols - about a third of the fans have the chance to win a dream holiday. Kelly Clarkson is putting her charm to good use on 'American Idol' as she tries to make a country album Kelly Clarkson is making a country album, while Adam Lambert, winner of season one, is looking to relaunch his pop career. The main show will begin on Monday evening with the Results Show - and time is running out for Ian, runner-up to American Idol winner Kris Allen, to tell us if he still has what it takes to beat the competition. If you thought we missed out on the first round of 'Whose Line Is It Anyway?' auditions, you're probably not that 'American Idol' fool! The hit improvisational comedy show has been resurrected this year with a new young panel of comedians. It's set to be hilarious - as always. The live programme begins with an L-shaped desk and audience and a traditional game with audience questions - however this year the contestants will have been picked by fans as part of their 'Singer-Runner-Upper' category. A group of singers were taken to Hollywood for the auditions where the judges were left shocked by their performances The'singers' are just one part of the programme - there are six other male and six female American Idols who will also be performing their own covers of classic 'American Idol' songs. The show has been revived by series creator, James Irwin
