These entities maintain a strict definition of conflict of interest and a fully transparent process for managing conflicts of interest among ACC/AHA committees and subcommittees. All members of the ACC/AHA Ad Hoc Writing Committees and the Task Force are required to disclose any real or potential conflicts of interest, including all financial and professional conflicts of interest, and must recuse themselves from all deliberations and writing activities relevant to their financial and personal conflicts of interest. In addition, all Task Force members are required to disclose all relevant professional relationships that might lead to bias, or favor a specific course of action. All members must also recuse themselves from all deliberations and writing activities relevant to their personal and financial conflicts of interest, and from all participation in any commercial entity that pays or promotes commercial products of relevance to the management or treatment of patients or the prevention or prediction of diseases. All ACC/AHA Guideline Development Group members (who all adhere to the ACC/AHA conflict of interest policies) are also required to recuse themselves from all deliberations and writing activities relevant to their personal and financial conflicts of interest.
