It allows you to work, surf the Internet or watch television from anywhere in the house. In the office, employees can use a shared connection instead of investing in expensive wireless equipment. Additionally, for public places, wireless networks are a big attraction for visitors. Unfortunately, there are so many of them that it can be hard to connect to one. The reason for this is that even though you can easily get a connection with a laptop or PDA, you may not have that same luck with a mobile phone. In this situation, you can use a wireless adapter to connect to the network. In this article, we will look at the technology behind wireless networking, and see some of the best wireless adapters available. How wireless networks work In order to send data to a wireless network, a piece of hardware called a wireless adapter is used. This device has an antenna attached to it which picks up the radio waves that represent the information. As there are many wireless networks, this makes it hard to know the exact frequency to use for each network. It is possible to connect to a network at different frequencies, but a common practice is to stick with one frequency. As a result, your wireless network device will have an associated radio frequency. The radio frequency ranges from 2.4 GHz to 5 GHz. When you connect to a wireless network, you are using the radio frequency associated with that network. You also cannot use the radio frequencies of the other wireless networks. If you do, the network will not be able to detect you and refuse to connect. Standard wireless networks In order to connect to a wireless network, you have to first choose the network that you want to connect to. Your wireless adapter will then be programmed with a code that is specific to the network you are connecting to. Once you know the code, you simply need to press a button on your wireless adapter to send it the code. The network then knows that it has to accept connections from the device, and will take you directly to the Internet. You will not need 2edc1e01e8
