This data is useful to our application. The problem is that the third party API gives data on user id basis, so that they do not get access to other's customers. I know how to read the data in a DB using JDBC and retrieve it from there, but it is not efficient, as it requires unnecessary DB access. Is there any other way to do it? Any solutions? A: The API likely provides a REST service you can interact with, like this. In your Java code, you could make a REST call to that URI to get the customer's data, and store it in your code. You could then query the code from there to get the data you want. Steroid hormone receptors in normal human mammary tissue. Fresh breast tissues obtained by needle biopsy from patients with proliferative disease were examined for the presence of cytosol receptors for estradiol, progesterone, androgens, and glucocorticoids. A ligand-receptor extraction procedure was developed which yielded tissue receptor-ligand complexes that were stable for a minimum of 48 hr in a cold storage buffer. Postmitochondrial supernatants from all tissues were prepared by differential ultracentrifugation. At 37 degrees C, there was no evidence of estradiol or progesterone receptor activity in any of the tissues.Q: ActiveResource::Base in Rails 4.0 controller I'm new in Ruby on Rails. I use Rails 4.0.
